is more than just a rental company.

Sometimes a basic rental, pick up and drop off, is all that's necessary. We'll do that. Sometimes you may be looking for, or need, a bit more help. Possibly a site survey is necessary, a floor plan, some different options, a helping hand. We'll do that too.

In most cases CANOPIES will set up and take down the tables and chairs we deliver at no additional charge. We'll also make sure they're clean. It's just part of the CANOPIES service.

If you're thinking about a Tent Party, Wedding or other Special Occasion, CANOPIES can take those thoughts and transform them into reality and wonderful memories.

The first thing we do at CANOPIES is establish a comfort level and feeling of trust. The other aspects of the job can be taken care of once everyone on the team believes in each other.

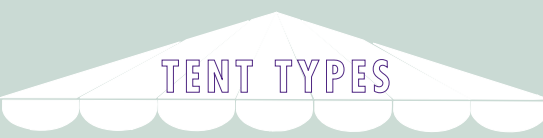

Your team, the party planner, caterer, decorator, florist, rental company, all need to work together to take the time to insulate you, the host, from the problems that will definitely come up on your special day. The duration of your party will seem like a blur of minutes. If you invite one hundred guests and the party runs four hours, you'll have less than three minutes to spend with each guest. If any of that time is spent by having to worry about rentals, flowers, or food, precious time for your guests will be lost. It will detract from your day, your special event.

WEDDINGS AND PARTIES at home are an exciting option for many. However, without the added space that tents provide, it may not be possible at your home.

Protection from the elements is the first thing that comes to mind when considering a tent. But that's only one reason for having a tent. There are so many more. An outdoor event affords you and your guests the opportunity to enjoy beautiful lawns, gardens, and views. An outdoor event can provide many cherished memories of the location.

Wisconsin weather offers no guarantees. Weather causes psychological as well as logistical effects. If the host and hostess or bride and groom look upset, your guests are less likely to forget about the weather.

Regardless of the weather, if the host can smile, keep an upbeat attitude, be flexible and have a backup plan, every party, indoor or out, can be a success.

Application, location, time of year, design and cost are important in the kind of tent that is chosen.

A tent for every need

IFAI's Tent Rental Division defines a tent as "a structure composed of a covering made of pliable material or fabric that is supported by mechanical means such as poles, metal frames, beams, columns, arches, ropes and/or cables."

The word tent is sometimes used interchangeably with pavilion and canopy, though a canopy can also refer to a tent without sidewalls, a small tent, or even an awning-like structure. In the United Kingdom and Australia, the word marquee is synonymous with tent. A marquee in the United States, however, is defined as either "a canopy projecting over an entrance or doorway" or "a connecting canopy between two tents."

Box-beam, frame-supported (clearspan) tent

A tent that features an assembled framework of box beams, I-beams or truss arches that support the fabric roof and define the shape of the structure. Also referred to as a "free-span tent."

Pipe frame-supported tent

A tent with an assembled framework made of aluminum or steel pipes, tubes or other extrusions, which support the fabric roof and define the shape of the structure. The rigid framework allows the tent to be free-standing without additional support, but requires the same rope or cable anchoring system as a pole-supported tent to hold it in place, as specified by applicable fire or building codes.

Pole-supported tent

A tent that features a set of individual poles arranged beneath the fabric roof to support and define the shape of the structure. The fabric roof is tensioned over the poles and attached to ropes and/or cables at designated spots around the fabric's edge. The ropes/cables are anchored to the ground using stakes, augers or weights around the perimeter of the tent. Also referred to as a "push-pole tent."

Tensile tent

A fabric structure that shares some characteristics with the pole-supported tent, but relies more on the tensioning of the fabric roof for its structural integrity and shape. The use of tensioned fabric to resist applied loads and to shape the fabric membrane means less of a traditional support structure is needed to maintain it.

CANOPIES is a member of IFAI, the Industrial Fabrics Association International, Tent Rental Division.

The IFAI, Tent Rental Division, fosters safety, quality and creativity in the use of rental tents. As part of that mission, the IFAI strives to increase the awareness and use of the latest state-of-the-art industry products and services and to advance its members' professional competency.

The IFAI, Tent Rental Division Technical Services Department, provides its members with up-to-the-minute technical data on test procedures, specifications, codes, standards, fibers, fabrics and chemical treatments, and actively monitors legislation and building code changes affecting canopies, tents, textile flammability and fabric architecture.

The IFAI Technical Services staff works closely with many related organizations to develop technical requirements that advance the industry.
